Talk by President of IMECHE UK

7 Februari 2017

The president start the talk by sharing to the audience about his personal career paths taken, where he undertook many jobs as design engineer in Formula 1 related businesses. He then follow up with his past experience as an IMECHE committee member in United Kingdom, as well as the post he had undertaken before becoming the President of the current term. He has shared some valuable tips on what actually are being seek by our potential employers during interview. He exposes that the employers' main concern are the characteristics, attitudes and ethics which may contribute just as much to the company as the technical expertise would. This talk has been beneficial and informative to the student, and hopefully students can use this knowledge to increase their employability in their future undertakings.

"The employers already know that you're qualified for the job from your resume, what really matter to them are things that are no on the resume."

Jon Hilton, President of IMechE UK
